Practice Group

Schellenberg Wittmer's Information and Communication Technology (ICT) Group advises on all legal matters related to ICT. Data privacy, both under Swiss law and the EU General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), new technologies and cybersecurity build further strong pillars of the practice group.

For projects and transactions, the ICT Group is fully skilled in all contractual, transactional and regulatory matters in different industry sectors (e.g. finance, life sciences, retail) and has immediate access to specific expertise and resources in related areas of law (e.g. intellectual property, employment, competition, regulatory, litigation and arbitration).

Expertise

Our ICT Group represents clients in matters involving:

- Drafting and negotiation of ICT contracts (e.g. license, support, system, XaaS)
- ICT projects and transactions, including concept, structure, contract drafting, negotiations, SLAs and legal assistance in implementation (e.g. transition, transformation, benchmarking) and termination/migration
- Issues around internet, e-commerce or the Internet of Things (e.g. disclaimers and terms of use, regulatory framework)
- Legal topics around communication technology (e.g. regulatory, lawful intercept)
- Data privacy, both under Swiss law and the EU GDPR, including representation of companies in proceedings with data protection

- regulators
- Set-up and implementation of data protection compliance programmes under Swiss law and GDPR
- Specific data protection issues (e.g. data pooling, data offshoring, questions related to records management, big data, data analytics and profiling)
- Set-up and implementation of cyber security programmes, provision of cyber incident response teams, and legal action against cybercrime
- Emerging technologies (e.g. IoT, AI)
- Set-up and drafting of contracts for building information modelling (BIM)
- ICT compliance issues (e.g. license management, open source software)
